AIR FORCE EXPANSION

(From Our Own Correspondent)
Canton, Yesterday.

General Chen Chi-tang, the Commander-in-Chief of the First Group Army, is making great strides in the expansion of the Canton Air Force. He has instructed General Lin Fu-yu, the Chief of Staff of the Canton Air Force, to recruit 100 apprentices to be trained as mechanics.

It is understood that General Chen plans to establish a large aeroplane plant capable of turning out military as well as commercial planes in Kwangtung. The Canton Mission, composed of flying experts, headed by General Wong Kwong-yu, the Chief of the Canton Air Force, are now touring Europe and are inspecting the various aeroplane works, aerodromes, and flying schools in England.

It is stated that the aim of this mission is to secure foreign technical experts to come to Canton for the supervision and construction of a modern aeroplane manufacturing plant here.

The local air force are now undergoing intensive training at the Shau Kau Ling aerodrome. Early every morning military planes can be seen soaring over Shek-pai, practising formations and "stunts". Training is divided into three sections, scouting, bombing and aerial fighting.

U.S. DELEGATE INFORMS STATE DEPARTMENT

NEW MOVE CAUSES SURPRISE IN AMERICAN CIRCLES

THE EFFECT ON JAPAN

New York, Yesterday.

The United States delegate to Geneva, Mr. Norman Davis, has informed the State Department that Great Britain is proposing to build a larger navy, according to the Washington correspondent of the "New York Times."

The proposals are being considered on the understanding that they are merely exploratory suggestions, according to the Secretary of State, Mr. William C. Clegg.

The correspondent adds that the State Department was surprised to receive concrete suggestions thus early in the conversations. The expectation has been that nothing definite would develop in London for weeks or even months.

THERE IS AN IMPRESSION OF DISAPPOINTMENT OVER THE MOVE LEFT BRITAIN, BY SETTING FORTH THE NEEDS FOR A LARGER NAVY, SHOULD ENCOURAGE JAPAN TO ASK FOR A STRONGER FLEET.

It is regarded as rather remote that it would work the other way and discourage Japan because of the cost of asking for naval parity.—Reuter.

QUEEN'S CLUB FINAL

London, Yesterday.

Sydney Wood, ranked No. 3 among the Americans at Wimbledon this year, defeated Frank X. Shields, No. 1 ranking player in America, by 11-9, 6-0 today to win the Queen's Club Lawn Tennis title.—Reuter.

Wood won the Wimbledon title in 1931, being conceded a walk-over by Shields, who was unable to compete owing to a strained knee.

There was considerable friction in the semi-finals on Friday when four Americans, F. X. Shields and G. M. Lott, and S. B. Wood and Lester Stoeffen competed, the umpires being completely ignored.

In the match between Shields and Lott the players ignored the umpire, making their own decisions, while in the other match the first umpire refused to carry on, being replaced by a second.

Shields is ranked fifth at Wimbledon this year, while Wood is ranked seventh.

SHORT STORY.

LOOT

By REARDEN CONNER.

CORK was burning. There had been looting in the city all that night. Hundreds of pounds' worth of clothing and stuffs were going up in flames. The poor people salvaged what they could and bore the results of their efforts triumphantly away.

Women came down from the Coal Quay in shawls. They went home in fur coats and the latest in hats, looking all the more ludicrous because of their ill-gotten finery. Men appeared in suits that were sizes too big for them, and boots that were a size too small. The military and Black and Tans made efforts to stop the looting, but it went on furtively amid the smoking ruins.

Martha Kennedy stood at her window high up in a tenement near the Bridewell. She was staring at the leaping flames. She saw the heart of a city being burned to ashes, a tragically beautiful sight. Black smoke plumed up to the winter sky, which now glowed as though it were a sea of blood, a sea of all the blood split violently over Ireland, suspended there between earth and heaven.

Down below Martha saw figures scurrying hither and thither. They jabbered in the rapid flat voices characteristic of the poor in Cork city. She opened her window to catch what they were saying. One of them heard the squeak of the window and lifted a haggard face framed in the black cowl of a shawl. "Is that yourself, Mrs. Clancy?" she called.

"No," Martha shouted down. "It's me."
 "God love us," ejaculated the woman, "it's Martha Kennedy! What's the matter with an able-bodied woman like yourself to be indoors to-night? Don't ye know what's happenin'?"

"They're burnin' down the city, aren't they?"
 "Yeh. So they are—bad luck to 'em! Cash's is up in flames. An' 'tis enough to bring blood from a stone to see all the lovely things bein' burnt afore yer very eyes! But there's good pickin's, lovey, all the same. Why aren't ye down there? P'raps ye might be findin' a thing or two for yourself!"

"But what about Curfew?"
 "Yerra—who's mindin' about Curfew on this night an' the town fallin'—about our ears? If—that man of yours was worth his salt he'd be bringin' ye home a grand planner by this time."

Martha watched the old hag hobble off in the direction of the Coal Quay. She closed down the window and went back into the room.

Phil, her husband, lay on the narrow bed in which they both managed somehow to sleep the long dreary nights away. He lay on his back with one arm trailing over the side of the bed. The hand hung loosely within three inches of the floor. He puffed out his cheeks and made strange noises with his breath at intervals, "Pooch-pooch—pooch!" The flesh of his face seemed to have fallen down on to his jawbones. The skin was yellow and dry. The eyes were too deep in their sockets, sunken and luminous from slow hidden disease.

Martha stood looking down at him. He had taken off his jacket, but no other article of clothing. He had not troubled to remove his boots. They were smeared with coddling from the streets and smelled faintly. Everything in the room smelled for that matter. The few sticks of furniture, the paper on the walls, the bedclothes, the pots in which food had to be cooked. Well—there was no help for it! Water was not convenient in the tenement, and soap had to be bought with hard cash.

Martha looked from her sprawling husband to her children. There were three of them, the eldest not more than four years old. Their faces and bodies were clean, but their clothes were dirty, always dirty. Martha was afraid to wash their few wearables in case they fell apart in the water.

They lay huddled together in a bed built of planks and sacking. They had the same yellow skin as their father, the same sunken eyes, and a pinched hungry look which made old gentlemen expect to be asked for a penny on sight of them. Over them Martha had draped their own clothing and her worn coat with its cheap half-rotten band of imitation fur. They were cold as they lay there. They shivered in their sleep as the chill air crept in to bite at their flesh. Now and again the eldest, Mike, kicked his feet clear of the coat. Martha patiently tucked them in again.

She began to pace up and down the room, trying to keep herself warm. She had eaten nothing since mid-day, and then only two thin slices of bread and "servants' butter" at a house in Western-road where she was employed on two mornings of the week as a char.

Phil had been out of a job for two years. He picked up "bits" here and there. He ran errands, carried bags for old ladies, or "caddied" for golfing gentlemen out on Douglas golf links. Somehow they had survived. "Glory be to God," said Martha to herself many a time, "we haven't starved to death yet!"

Phil had tried hard, she knew. Ill-health and despair had almost beaten him at last. He was but a wreck of the man she had married. And although he had degenerated mentally as well as physically she still loved him with all her heart. She loved him so much that she was at his beckoning, hating herself afterwards for so loving a man that a new being was born into poverty as a result.

Martha walked up and down, up and down. The crowd still jabbered in the street. A lorry of Black and Tans whined up. A searchlight flashed over the heads of the people on the pavements, swept along the housefronts, sanctified the Kennedy room for a bare instant with a blaze of white light, and then faded into blackness. A stentorian voice called out again and again. No one of the crowd took any notice. Away towards North Main-street a shot was fired. The lorry whined off, and the Coal Quay people cheered in derision.

Martha flapped her hands across her shoulders. The wind was howling around the high tenement building. It was a frost-charged wind which ate through the old brickwork as water seeps through cardboard. There was no fire in their one-room dwelling, no food in the cupboard. Only half a tin of cocoa—and no sugar to sweeten it.

Down below in the tenement voices were raised in hilarious merriment. Old Gaffer Mahoney was telling one of his "ripe wans" no doubt, thought Martha. She opened the room door and went on to the landing. She closed the door carefully after her to keep the draught from her sleeping charges. It was bitterly cold on the landing. She leant on the banisters of the rickety staircase and listened to the warm quick voices of the people in the hall beneath.

Then someone began to mount the stairs, slowly and heavily with much panting. Martha slipped back into the room. The feet tramped up the stairs and came to a halt on the very spot where she had been standing. There was a suffling sound and a light tap on the door.

Martha tip-toed across to the children's bed, then walked firmly back to the door. She found Mrs. Clancy, a widow who lived across the landing, standing outside. A smell of whisky exuded from her. Her thin, hard face and small pig-like eyes glowed with the light of excitement. In her arms she held a bale of red silk. It was a heavy bale and she could scarcely manage it.

"Look! Look, Mrs. Kennedy!" she cried, like a youngster who has just opened a penny package. "Look what I got!"

She lifted up the bale so that Martha could inspect her prize more closely. It was silk of the finest quality, not shiny like the cheap stuff one saw displayed in North Main-street.

"Where did ye get it?" Martha asked, overcome now by curiosity. "In Cash's. It's burnin' to the ground. An' they're fightin' like tinkers down there, tearin' the things out av sich other's arms. But Devil a wan could get this away from me, I may tell ye, wance I got hold of it! Think of all the swank dresses I'll be able to go out in this comin' summer! Won't I be cuttin' a dash—eh!"

The old woman prattled on and on. "Why don't ye go down there yourself, acushla?" she wound up. "There's everythin' ye want just

Sport Shorts In The Fashion Perfect Table Exhibition

Tailored Grey Flannel.

THE best dress show in London recently was held in broad sunshine one evening to show the newest of Spectator Sports wear. These included the new sport shorts which have replaced long trousers for holidays. The shorts were mostly of tailored grey flannel or natural linen, and the blouses were of checked and plaid millane silk. Red and blue designs on pale grey were the favourite colour schemes, with pale grey linen jackets woven with blue crosses.

Designs By Society Hostess.

EXHIBITION of linen and china, which is called the forty-eight perfect tables was recently held in London.

Each table has been designed by a famous society hostess. An all-pink tea table with a pink cloth and china which was specially made to match the colour. The small plates were octagonal shaped and the design was of tiny white flower heads. Included in this exhibition was a replica of Queen Victoria's white damask breakfast cloth.

The Sexangle Hat Brim.

THERE are few exceptions to brimmed hats in the latest collections, says our Paris fashion expert. They may be wide and round, with short, shallow, or Mandarin crowns. When the latter occur brims invariably turn up at the edge.

The simple square has developed into a sexangle brim. Hats worn with linen crash morning suits usually have lesser brims and slightly higher crowns trimmed with a band of material to match a blouse. One example in plain linen crash points to the morning suit in the same fabric worn with the Chinese red and white spotted China model.

A New Idea In Sandals.

A NEW sandal is one which throws a new light on the big toe.

The part which should cover the toe is cut away, showing a flash of colour—if the toe-nails are lacquered to match the finger-nails. One London shop displays these Jom-sandals in various plain and striped materials.

A LARGE CROWD SAW SOUTH CHINA "B" DEFEAT A TEAM FROM H.M.S. PHOENIX BY TWO GOALS TO NIL IN A FRIENDLY SOCCER MATCH ON THE SOUTH CHINA ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION'S GROUND, CAROLINE HILL, YESTERDAY.

Handicapped by the absence of three of their best players, McNeill, Newman and King, who were injured in their last game with the same Chinese team, the Phoenix did well to ward off a bigger defeat.

Leech, though he had the misfortune to give South China a gift goal, played well between the sticks, while Nicholson, Morgan and West played good football.

South China fielded a strong team, good combination and accurate long range shots being the feature of their play. South China's goal was scored by Tay Kwee-ling in the first half.

MISS YEUNG SAU-KING CHALLENGED

The champions had a "day-off" at the South China Athletic Association's swimming gala which was held at their pavilion, North Point, last night before an enormous crowd.

In many of the main events, swimmers who have won club championships or represented the club in the recent Far Eastern Olympic sports at Manila, were excluded, with a view to encouraging the younger swimmers of the club.

Although below the Club's best mark, the time recorded by the S.C.A.A. "A" team, who won the main event of the evening, the 200 metres invitation relay, was extremely good. The winners were unchallenged throughout, finishing three full seconds ahead of the Chinese Bathing Club. The latter had a keen tussle with the Chinese Y.M.C.A. before winning by a narrow margin.

OLD COURSE AT FANLING

Not Seriously Damaged By Rainstorms.

DEEPWATER BAY AND HAPPY VALLEY COURSES CLOSED UNTIL JULY 2

A report has been received from the Royal Hong Kong Golf Club that the courses at Fanling have not been seriously damaged by the heavy rains, only a few places where work has been in progress recently having suffered.

The old course is expected to be in good condition for play to-day.

The courses at Happy Valley and Deep Water Bay, however, have both been closed until Monday, July 2.

The stream in front of the fourth and second tees at Deep Water Bay broke its banks, and deposited a quantity of stone and sand on the first green and fairway.

Given reasonable weather it is hoped that this green may be in use again in a fortnight. The water had at its highest reached half-way up the bank on which the first tee is situated.

At Happy Valley pools of water are lying round, and a quantity of loose earth and sand have yet to be removed before the course can be in use again.

The rainfall recorded at Fanling for June 20-21, was 3.57 inches, and 5.16 inches on June 22-23.

Also swam: Lo Yee-sze, Li Ping-fui and Leo To-ye.

WHY DILLINGER IS AT LARGE

Desperado Helped By Many U.S. Citizens

Can Walk Freely In Streets Of Some Towns

(By ROBERT WALLING)

WHY is it so hard, with soldiers and airplanes now joining in the hunt, to catch Dillinger?

Despatches from America, describing almost daily the three months' hunt for the gunman who tricked his way out of Crown Point Prison, have told of escape after escape; of "battles" between his gang and the police, of east-iron ambushes that have been pierced.

"It would not last in England for more than 24 hours"—is the surprised comment here.

It would not.

But in America things work differently.

Dillinger does not necessarily bear a charmed life. Bullets do not deflect themselves mysteriously when a gun is discharged at him; he is not a better shot, neither is he faster on the trigger, than many of those who thought they were firing (on the occasion) into his face. (There is no direct testimony that Dillinger was present).

First it must be explained that Dillinger was a member of one of the big gangs, the ramifications of each of which are wider than the average Englishman credits.

The gangster found that profits were not quick enough. Having ambitions, he chose a few tough friends to leave the gang with him and go "on the heavy"—to rob banks. It is one of the quickest and surest "rackets" known to gangsters. It demands toughness and the fiercest of determination against possible police inference.

Main Reasons.

But Dillinger has not cut entirely free from the old gang. Such a policy would be foolish. Actually his old colleagues still recruit him to their aid during a dangerous mission: in return he depends upon them for a share of any benefits they may derive from substantial payments to the police and/or to State departments of justice.

In this distant connection with his old gang rests one important reason why Dillinger escapes capture—or death, with seeming regularity. It is that payments of large sums with threats of blackmail and worse ensure for active members of the "parent" gang a complete scout, or spy, service among business men, among officials of all kinds and with all degrees of power, and even in the ranks of State police.

But there is still another army constantly helping him. Its members are ordinary citizens of the United States. Nobody would suspect them. They never act unless it would help a man like Dillinger.

"Cop-Simple" Man.

They know Dillinger is what is called "cop-simple," meaning that because of some imaginary or real act of police treachery he is engaged in a private war with the Federal agents, and is now shooting them down on sight, out of spite.

These citizens—there are stated to be large numbers of them in every State—hate the Federals for several reasons, one of the chief being that the agents are stated to have shot innocent persons in the prohibition era. This has given them a bad name.

Is it any wonder then that there are grounds for believing that during a "battle" between Dillinger and the Government agents not all the bullets aimed at the Federal police come from the gangster and his men? In the heat of such a tussle it would be almost impossible for the agents to obtain evidence for use later against a member of the public.

A gangster such as Dillinger is so sure of such support against Federal agents that he can walk freely in the streets of several American towns.

One of the towns is St. Paul, Minnesota. He was there recently.

Mr. James Spenser, co-author of "Limey: An Englishman Joins the Gangs," who is an ex-gangster, tells me that St. Paul has been a town with a large thieves' hide-out for a quarter of a century. It is run by some of the hotel-keepers who, prospering by high-living gangsters, are more than reluctant to give criminals away and, in fact, give them protection. Gunmen and others are on the right side of the State police so long as they do not break the local laws. Only the Federal men, who are above all State laws, can dig them out.

Lack Of Cohesion.

Measures to capture Dillinger are further hampered from within the police ranks. Detectives who chase him from the State in which they are employed are rebuffed by the authorities of the State to which the chase has led them—which, as he is believed to have ranged from South Dakota east to Ohio, makes things no easier. Furthermore, the Federal men are not welcomed by the police of any State. There is no cohesion.

The "lie of the land" is often a big factor in Dillinger's favour. Take one of the States in which he has been moving—Wisconsin. He knows it very well.

The State is 6,000 square miles bigger than England. We, here, have a population of 50,000,000 people: Wisconsin has just over 3,000,000, of which half are of direct descent from forebears who came recently from every quarter of Europe. There are also negroes, Indians, Chinese and Japanese.

It is one of the leading agricultural States. In it farmers, busy mostly on making most of America's cheese, mind their own business and the "towns" are mostly hamlets populated with slow-thinking yokels. There are tremendous areas of wooded country in a State which, not so long ago, was covered with forest; there are few roads when you leave the main routes; and there are only 7000 miles of railway.

The other cards John Dillinger holds are still more powerful, and they prevent inquirers obtaining clues when he is on the run.

Apart from those members of the ordinary public who, because they hate Federal agents, actively assist his escape, he has the passive assistance of a vast number of men and women who are too scared to tell what they know.

Citizens Intimidated.

These people are afraid of a friend of Dillinger returning in the near future to pay off a talkative person with an accurate bullet. The reasons seem sufficient to American citizens.

That is why a gangster, forced to come periodically into the open to steal money and petrol, vanishes "into the blue" so far as the Federal agents are concerned—although he may be only a few miles away from them.

A reason for some amount of sympathy stated to be held by Dillinger is the belief that he was unjustly condemned originally for robbing a greengrocer, and that he is fighting a justified war against society. The realisation that his efforts are now directed exclusively against the police will lend extra colour to the belief. Citizens who withhold information from the police save their consciences by recalling this legend.

TO OUR POLICYHOLDERS,—

Of the 392 legal-reserve life insurance Companies in the U.S.A. and Canada that are listed by "Best's", the foremost life insurance rating-manual, 93 are rated "A." ("Best's" rating, as explained by themselves, is "from the policyholder's viewpoint—not the stockholder's or yet the agent's." The fact that a Company is rated below "A" does not mean, necessarily, that it is not a good Company, or that its policyholders' security is, in any sense, impaired; it means only that "Best's" consider the policyholders' security and investment advantages lesser in such a Company than in the Company of class "A.")

Among the 93 "A" Companies, only 3 of them — 1 Canadian and 2 American — increased in 1932 in all respects, — insurance in force, new insurance effected, assets, and surplus, — over 1931. Your Company was among the select 3 of the highest ranking 93.

Not more than 3 grade "A" Companies out of the total of 392 listed Companies increased in 1932 and 1933. Of this possible total of 3, thus far we know of only 1 Company which increased annually in all respects during these two years, — that Company which again surpassed, in 1933, the new insurance issued, insurance in force, assets, and surplus of the preceding year, is your Company, the CROWN LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY.

TWO BRIDGE DEALS
IDENTICALStrange Coincidence In London Match.SAME HANDS FOR SAME PLAYERS

London.

By an amazing card freak two consecutive hands of bridge identical in every way were dealt at a London club.

The occurrence is vouched for by Mr. Roland A. Harper, secretary of the club. He writes:

"During a Duplicate Contract Bridge match between the Alford Club and the Forest Hill Country Club, at table No. 1, where Mrs. Spicer and Mr. R. A. Harper, of the Alford Club, were opposed to Messrs. P. R. Bolton and H. J. Belshaw, of the Forest Hill Country Club, two consecutive hands were dealt, absolutely identical, to the same four players.

"The two packs were both shuffled out and dealt in turn by South and West.

"Although all four players recognised that they had the same hand again they were of course, not aware that the other three had also. Bidding and play continued and no comment was made until the hand was completed."—Reuter.

PAPAL SUNDAY.

Feast Celebrated
Every Year.

To-day the Catholics of Hong Kong will celebrate Papal Day.

This Feast is celebrated each year all over the Catholic world: it is a day which is set aside as a mark of respect and reverence for the Holy Father the Pope, Pius XI, who now fills the Chair of Peter, and is the successor to him to whom the charge was given—"Feed My sheep."

Why Dillinger Is At Large.

How He Escapes.

These reasons may help to illuminate what is most baffling to English people—the mystery of how he escapes.

But in more detailed explanation of the agent's failure to get their man when he is cornered it must be stated that some of Dillinger's personal and armed scouts are never at his side. They keep at a cautious distance of anything up to a mile away.

When he enters a building they watch it and every approach to it. The Federal agents never know in which direction the next bullet aimed against them will come.

$2.80 TO CAST
OUT DEVILSBlind Man's Temple A Nuisance.

WEIRD COURT SCENE

That she paid $2.80 for worshipping the gods in the hope that she might have the devils cast out of her body, was the evidence given by Chung Ying, a licensed hawk, at the Central Magistracy before Mr. E. W. Hamilton yesterday morning, in the case in which Chan Chi-yan, a blind man, was summoned for unlawfully taking part in the maintenance, or in the management, or in the service of a Chinese temple which is established contrary to the provision of Chinese Temple Ordinance No. 7, of 1928, at No. 21 Western Street, second floor, on June 15.

Chung Ying stated that she met accused the day before in the street and asked him to tell her fortune. He told her that she was possessed by devils and advised her to worship. In a temple. She replied that she did not know how to worship, and accused urged her to go to his place, No. 21 Western Street. The sum of $3 was asked, for which she bargained down to $2.80.

Inspector K. W. Andrew said last Wednesday, that he was instructed by the S.C.A. to bring the case to Court, and that the temple was established contrary to the provision of the Chinese Temple Ordinance in that the temple in this case was not registered.

Mr. R. R. Todd, chief assistant Secretariat of Chinese Affairs, said yesterday morning, that the summons was served due to complaints received, from people in the neighbourhood and that defendant had become a regular nuisance by the noise of gongs and drums which accompanied his rituals.

A regular temple, consisting of all the paraphernalia, including 19 gods and goddesses, foodstuffs, tablets, joss sticks and paper, a paper horse and tortoise shells, were set up in court during the hearings.

In binding the defendant over in the sum of $100 to come up for judgment in six months, Mr. Hamilton said that he quite appreciated the fact that he was blind. The maximum fine for an unregistered temple is $500.

Their shooting is unsteady as a result.

In the gangster world it is believed that Dillinger, by a roundabout route, is making for Ozarks, Missouri. The country is wild, mountainous—the Corsica of the United States. In it there are no ordinary means of transport or communication. The people are reputed to live outside the law.

In any case law in the United States is not what it is here: it is a good country for any man on the run.

SIR CECIL CLEMENTI

STRAITS GOVERNOR RESIGNS.

Education Policy Disapproved.

London, June 15.
It is alleged that Sir Cecil Clementi's resignation from the post of Governor of the Straits Settlements and High Commissioner for the Malay States is not unconnected with the Colonial Office's severe disapproval of his educational policy.

Sir Shenton, Thomas K.C.M.G., O.B.E., his successor from the Gold Coast, is described by a mutual friend as "a strong man of the Colonial Service, with sturdy common sense and no frills; a good mixer, with innate dignity, and ability to see both sides of a question, and most likely to prove a very popular Governor and High Commissioner."

Sir Cecil Clementi, G.C.M.G., K.C.M.G., F.R.G.S., LL.D., M.A., who was Governor of Hong Kong from 1925 to 1929, caused the greatest controversy in recent years by his resuscitation of the proposals to introduce a greater measure of decentralisation in the Malay States.

COLONY'S PLACE IN AVIATION

BRITISH ENTERPRISE NOT LAGGING

LOCAL ADVOCATES' VIEWS

LAST week an article by A. M. Crawley was published in the "Sunday Herald," advocating British progress in aviation in the Far East with Hong Kong as the key to the route. He bewailed the shortsightedness of the Englishman, whom he charged with gazing at the map, instead of achieving something to stop America's challenge for the Colony's mails.

This week Sir William Shenton and Major E. B. Brasier Creagh, two prominent advocates of linking the Colony with the world's airways, have given their views on the situation in the form of interviews.

Sir William Shenton

Major Brasier Creagh

Describing the question of international airways as one of the most contentious of present day problems, Sir William Shenton, who is a prominent advocate of linking the Colony with the world's airways, told the "Sunday Herald" that little could be said of the negotiations in that direction at the present time.

Although the scheme was well out of the embryo stage, there remained several problems which were proving a stumbling block to the concerns interested in extending an air route to the Colony.

"However," I may say that such a link is inevitable and should be established in the not too distant future," he declared.

The crux of the whole problem, he said, was that China was not a member of the International Agreement, and, until negotiations with her had been successfully concluded, little could be done, MUST OVER CHINA TERRITORY

"With regard to a matter like aviation in a small Colony like Hong Kong, there is always a tendency, and rightly so, to leave the matter more or less to the Government at Home. The Home Government, after all, have all the political machinery to enter into negotiations with foreign Governments to obtain concessions to pass through territory," said Major E. B. Brasier Creagh when interviewed by the "Sunday Herald" on the subject of Hong Kong as an air port.

Ever since arriving in the Colony in 1931 Major Brasier Creagh has shown considerable interest in aviation, and the possibilities of linking Hong Kong with other airways with the purpose of securing a through service to Europe.

CHINESE PERMISSION

"The difficulty has always been, and will be for the time being, the question of obtaining permission to fly over Chinese Territory," he said. Hong Kong does not want a large concession in this way. The total amount of China that it would be necessary to fly over, in order to link up with Imperial Airways in Bangkok, is about 450 miles of comparatively barren coastline, between here and Hanoi in French Indo-China.

"Negotiations have been proceeding with the Chinese Government for the past 18 months or so, with a view to obtaining this concession, but as to what the results have been, or are likely to be, has not yet been disclosed.

DUTCH EXPLOITATION

"The importance of Hong Kong as an air link with the Far East has been fully recognised by the Dutch. The J. C. J. L. who are agents here for the K.L.M., are fully alive to the possibilities, and it is possible that in the near future they will be advertising the Dutch line here. If a firm is willing to risk its dollars on advertising an airline, it is an indication that they are fully aware of its possibilities.

The Defaulted Bonds Question.

THE recent case brought by the Principality of Monaco against the State of Mississippi in the Supreme Court of the United States, for payment on bonds, on which the interest has been in default for about eighty years, was not much more than a practical joke; but it did raise some interesting points of financial history, and some curious, though rather rusty, legal controversies. The Great Civil War was largely fought on the question of State Rights, — the relationship of the separate States south of the Mason and Dixon line to the Federal Government; — and the constitutional history of a century can be summarised as the gradual growth of the central Government at the expense of the constituent States. The great Chief Justice Marshall ruled that certain powers not referred to in the Constitution could be inferred from the general doctrine of Sovereignty; and last year saw President Roosevelt 'infer' powers that had never been claimed by his predecessors, but which have quite recently been regularised by a ruling of the Supreme Court.

In the old days of the big plantations worked by slaves all manufactures were imported and paid for with exported cotton; except for a growing trade in tobacco, chiefly from Virginia. The growing manufactures of Lancashire had no other source of supply, and a number of sterling loans were raised to assist in rapid development by roads, railways, and similar requirements. There was always a shortage of cash in the Southern States, and the produce markets often had recourse to barter. Even international payments were sometimes made in kind. In 1863 for example, the big Paris financial firm of Erlanger & Cie. signed a contract to raise a loan of three million pounds sterling, to be underwritten at 75 per cent. Interest and principal could be repaid either in specie or in cotton at the fixed rate of sixpence per pound. Repayment was made in cotton, and the creditor did very well out of it, as owing to the blockade he was able to resell the cotton in Europe at an average of two shillings per pound. The transaction indicates that the recent proposal that War Debt should be partly paid in rubber and tin is not so very novel.

It would be a long business to trace the various currency troubles during, for example, the term of President Van Buren; or to follow the history and eventual dissolution of 'The United States Bank'; though only the earlier history can explain the surviving prejudice against a 'Central Bank'. Down South the worst time was the disastrous period of Reconstruction after the Civil War. One of the stages was the passing of Acts by the State Legislatures barring all individual foreign bondholders from access to the Courts so far as claims for the old bonds were concerned. The fact that the loans made by the Federal Treasury were carefully protected left a feeling of grievance; and files of these bonds were preserved on the chance that something might be got in the end.

Suit was eventually made in the Supreme Court by the 'Council of Foreign Bondholders' whose annual reports are the authority to be consulted on all questions of public default. The application was rejected on the ground that the Court could only entertain claims brought by Foreign States. To this was due the fact that when the 'American Market' was one of the big departments of the London Stock Exchange one saw quotations of Government Stock and Railway Bonds, but not of State securities.

Some ingenious bondholder was bound to try some time or other the plan of getting a claim made by some State for the British Government has always ruled that the claims were a private and not a public matter. It was found that the smallest State in Europe, — the Principality of Monaco, — was ready to oblige, no doubt on terms. Some bonds were made over it, and the case was brought. It is not likely that there was any hope of success, as the doctrine of prescription would probably apply; but the ingenious gentleman has served his purpose of proving that he has a claim on a liquid document which no American Court will hear on its merits.

It is not easy to say what the claims might have amounted to if the test case had been 'successful; for questions of exchange, and of whether the interest should be calculated as simple or compound would have to be settled. The ordinary calculation brings out a total of forty-seven million pounds; the highest runs up to seventy-six. It would be difficult to raise a fifty pound loan on the security of either calculation.

HONG KONG AND THE NEW TERRITORIES. — No. 110.

Summer Flowers.

Some of the most attractive of the Colony's flowers will shortly be coming into bloom. They include a lily and three ground orchids. The lily is Lilium Brownii var. colchesteri and is found throughout the whole of China. On our hillside it grows from two to five feet in height and usually bears two flowers though we have seen as many as four. Localities for the lily are Victoria Peak, High West, above the Tai Tam reservoirs, etc. The plant is strictly protected by law for the following reasons, wanton gathering of blooms and plants would soon result in complete extermination. The bulbs are eaten by the Chinese and if their collection was not prohibited the lily would soon disappear from the local hillside. Since 1915 when Government protection commenced the lily has increased considerably on Hong Kong Island, this has been particularly noticeable of recent years.

The flowers measure seven inches in length and are of two colour types. The first is white throughout but in the second the three outer perianth segments are marked with purple-bronze on the outside. The ripe anther lobes appear orange or red on account of the red colour of the pollen grains. The bulbs may be purchased in the market under the name of Hah Hop, they are imported from northern Kwangtung. This lily can be grown from seed quite easily though of course the plants will not flower for about three years. This was one of the first Chinese lilies to be introduced into Europe and was first grown in England in 1835 flowering there in 1837, from England they were sent to Holland where it was exhibited in public in 1841.

The three ground orchids are the Susan orchid Platanthera Susanae, the Sulphur orchid Habenaria acutifera and the Butterfly orchid Sphegodesmia pubescens. The first grows to a height of three to four feet the pure white flowers are three inches in diameter and each possesses a spur which may be as much as five inches in length. The flower possesses a fragrant smell which is most pronounced in the evening. Like so many of our finest flowers this orchid is better known in cultivation in greenhouses in England and America than it is here in Hong Kong. Localities Victoria Peak, above Tai Tam reservoirs, Tai Po, Tai-mo-shan, etc. Please do not dig up plants of this species.

The Sulphur orchid is one of the commonest ground orchids of the Colony. The stem is up to two feet in height and bears 10 to 30 flowers of a sulphur yellow colour which on fading turn chocolate. It cannot be confused with any other local species. Common on all hillside e.g. High West and Kowloon Peak, grows amongst grass in the open and flowers from July to September.

The Butterfly Orchid has been given this name because the golden yellow flowers are somewhat reminiscent of the common English meadow buttercup. The stem of from one to three feet bears three to eight yellow flowers. The leaves are all from the base not attached to the flower stalk as in the case of the Sulphur orchid. There is no possibility of confusing these two species. Very abundant on all these hillside of the Colony. This orchid is protected by the government, ordinance of 1925. The other plants protected by law are listed in H.K.N. Vol. III, p. 100.

continued to hamper operations. AMERICAN SCHEME

"The United States are particularly strong with their airways in China, having always given the Chinese a control of the services. A flight can, therefore, be made through Chinese territory on an American service, which is nominally Chinese.

"The British, however, have a strong argument in their favour, that is the geographical position of Malaya and India. If the Chinese ever wish to fly across these countries Great Britain will be in a position to barter with them.

"When the line is eventually run from Hong Kong to link up with the international services, it will, from a geographical necessity, have to join Imperial Airways at Bangkok. Friendly relations exist between the British Government and Siam, and a permanent landing ground is situated there.

"Bangkok is, in reality, the hub; the French line from Saigon calls there; Imperial Airways from Singapore, and eventually, when arrangements are completed, from Australia; and the Dutch line from Batavia. It is, therefore, the best, and closest place with which Hong Kong can link," he concluded.

COLONY AIR-MINDED

Major Brasier Creagh is convinced that the people of Hong Kong are air-minded, and that when the difficulties with the Chinese government over the passage along the south coast of China are surmounted, and should the contract not go to Imperial Airways, a strong and efficient local service will be inaugurated.

Major Brasier Creagh is of the opinion that, eventually, this permission will be granted. Britain is not asking for a large concession, and the emergency grounds, which will have to be laid out for the 450 miles of coast to be flown over, will benefit China.

PRETTY KOWLOON WEDDING

Australian Girl Who Was Delayed By Changte.

MARTIN—MUSKETT

St. Andrew's Church, Kowloon, was the scene of a very pretty wedding yesterday afternoon when Miss Maisie Gertrude Martin, of Australia, was married to Mr. William Hubert Bertram Muskett, of the Hong Kong Electric Company.

The bride, who arrived recently from Sydney on the s.s. Changte, is the oldest daughter of the late Mr. W. G. and Mrs. Martin, of Bondi, Sydney, and late of the Philippine Islands. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Muskett of Aberdeen, Scotland.

The Rev. J. R. Higgs officiated. The bride, looking charming in her wedding gown of ivory satin cut on classic lines, designed by "Revue" of Sydney, and carrying a bouquet of tangerine gladioli, was given away by Mr. J. R. Way, of the Hong Kong Electric.

The attending bridesmaids were Misses Isabella Pestonjee, Inva Buchanan, Jean Ewing and Laureen Cleme, who wore silver lame and eau-de-nil tulle and carried bouquets of pink carnations.

The duties of best man were performed by Mr. H. S. Jones, while the Matron of Honour was Mrs. J. R. Sulter.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at No. 254, Prince Edward Road, to which over 100 guests were invited.

The honeymoon is being spent in Canton.

MR. W. H. AUSTIN PASSES

Trade Commissioner Works Too Hard.

HONG KONG VISIT IN JANUARY

It will come as a shock to those who met him when he visited Hong Kong last January on a Trade Mission, to learn of the sudden death, on May 27, of Mr. W. H. Austin, Commissioner for Trade and Under Secretary, Department of Labour and Industry, Queensland, Australia.

Mr. Austin had not long returned from his Far Eastern Mission, and it is reported that over-work was mainly the cause of his death.

The Acting Premier of Queensland, Mr. Pease, stated "I am satisfied that work and worry over the relief of unemployment—sheer devotion to duty—brought about Mr. Austin's untimely death. I wish to pay a sincere tribute to Mr. Austin's great work and splendid character."

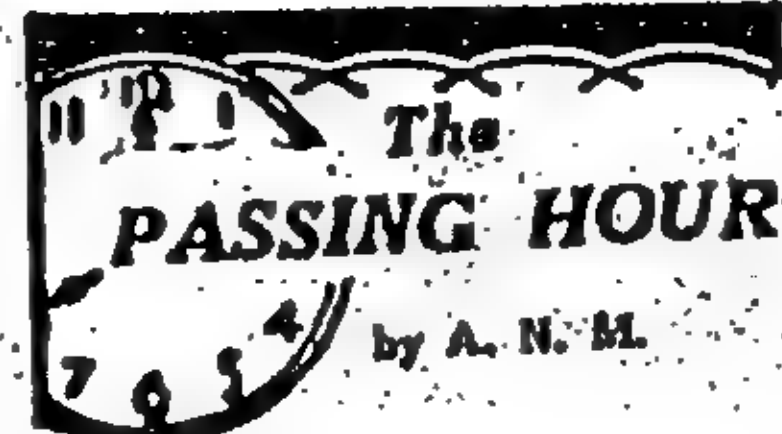

It was stated that Mr. Austin's judgment in Departmental matters was always respected by the State Cabinet. His breakdown in health was primarily caused by the untimely service that he gave to that Department for a long term of years. He was a man possessed of more than usual vision and imagination, and his untimely death was a great loss to the Department. He would be missed in connection with the colossal relief schemes with which he was personally associated during the last few years.

ARMED ROBBERY AT WOOD ROAD.

One Of Three Arrested Discharged.

Charged with the armed robbery at No. 8 Wood Road, on June 1, Wong Tsing, unemployed, Lo Sun-cheung, a fortune teller, and Lo Hoi-tong, unemployed, were brought before Mr. Q. A. A. MacFadyen at the Central Police Court yesterday morning, on a rehearing. On the application of Sergeant Fitches, the charge against Lo Hoi-tong was withdrawn. The others were remanded until Tuesday for hearing.

Sentence of four months' hard labour was imposed on Fong Chai, unemployed, by Mr. E. W. Hamilton, at the Central Magistracy yesterday morning, for the theft of a radiator cap, the property of Mr. B. A. Hyder, in Shaikwan last Thursday.

The Rabies Invasion.

RABIES is one of the most horrible misfortunes that can befall any human being. Anyone who has ever seen a case in the advanced stages will do anything he can to assist the police in enforcing any regulations there may be. But one may be allowed to have a regretful sigh over the wasted morning following upon the publication of a careful and very detailed description of symptoms. The trouble began when the telephone went at the most critical moment of the shaving operation. "Have you read the morning paper?" No, not yet. "Well do come and have a look at 'Spot,' he's looking at me with such an unusual affectionate gaze. I feel sure he's got it. Then at breakfast another ring. 'Do you think 'Blacky' has it. You know this morning he was quite uncharacteristically restless. Instead of coming to be patted as he usually does, he ran out as soon as the door was opened. Will you come and have a look at him?' Then came the neighbour, in person. 'You know 'Fido' this morning not only drank up all his own water, but went and finished the cat's milk as well. Do you think I should take him to the vet?' In fact, before I escaped to pursue my ordinary avocation, I had come to the conclusion that we all had it, and the only safe course would be to call in the police to conduct a general battue.

Such grumbles as seem to be justified are that the police attentions do not fall, like the rain from Heaven, alike on the just and the unjust; but on the easily identified. Government is the richer by eight dollars because one lady who had taken her dog out on a lead along one of the roads where seats are so thoughtfully provided for us to enjoy the view, and having sat down to use the opportunity, took the lead off to let her pet enjoy a roll in the grass three yards away. A constable who had watched the operation strode up and took the name and address; but ignored a couple of dogs further along the same road who had neither lead nor muzzle. It is a difficult job for the police; but it is well to avoid sarcastic remarks about people who are 'clothed in a little brief authority'.

Cricket Politics.

MR. Larwood seems to be the stormy petrel of sport. No sooner has he been withdrawn from the Test Matches on the ground that his poor delicate ankle is not likely to stand the effort, than he turns out in a County match and takes six wickets without any stress or strain. Apparently Clark, the Northants man, must have a delicate ankle too, as he is not mentioned. Not having seen either of them bowl, I do not know whether the charge of slinging at the batsman is justified or not; but I do not believe either can possibly be more terrible to stand up to than that hefty Lancashire coal-miner, Jack Crossland, forty years ago. The theory of the game was then that a man was given a bat to defend himself with, and if he could not so use it, God help him. On one occasion when the great Surrey hitter, the Reverend R. T. Thornton, was walking in, Crossland very audibly remarked, "I'll smash his blooming pupil for him."

A. N. Hornby promptly called him up and told him he must apologise; which he did by saying, "I'm sorry I said what I meant to do." With his first ball, which was not visible from the stand, he spreadeagled the wickets, and loudly remarked "but I did it."

The root of the whole trouble can be traced back, quaintly enough, to the same County, Notts, who invented the style of playing with the pads instead of with the bat. It is exasperating to any bowler to be defeated by a slight contemptuous movement of a leg. Three days used to be more than enough for any match until Gunn and Scotland introduced 'stone-walling' to break the bowling. On one day, after two hours play, Scotland had not broken his duck, while Gunn had only scored six. They were imitated by Barlow of Lancashire, Hall of Yorkshire, and the Australian Bannerman. The theory of 'off' bowling is absurd; for it means that the attack is adapting its tactics to suit the defence.

If the law, which is not very

Victim Of Demented Chinese.

MANY PAY LAST TRIBUTE

The funeral of Little Michael Pine, only son of Master Gunner Pine, R.A., and Mrs. Pine, whose tragic death occurred on Friday, took place at the Protestant Cemetery, Happy Valley, yesterday afternoon, the Rev. N. V. Halward, M.C., officiating.

His death was the result of the extraordinary action of a demented Chinese, who ran amok on Friday afternoon, soon after the heavy downpour of rain, and threw five children into the nullah beside the Lower Peak Tramway Station. After desperate efforts, four of the children were rescued, but Michael was swept into the enclosed portion of the nullah, his body being recovered as it emerged at the other end near the Victoria Recreation Club, on the edge of the harbour.

After the burial service had been read by the Rev. N. V. Halward, M.C., M. G. Pine, the boy's father, took a handkerchief containing toy soldiers, the favourite playthings of the little child, and placed these on the coffin. Mrs. Pine, was also present at the graveside.

Many Mourners. A large number of friends followed the hearse to the Cemetery gates, from whence the coffin was carried to the graveside by four Master Gunners of the Royal Artillery, M. Gnr. Wardle, M. Gnr. Sharp, M. Gnr. Timms and M. Gnr. Longman.

Others present were, Mr. and Mrs. Medina, Captain P. S. Cannon, A.E.C.; Captain E. Hague, R. A. and Mrs. Hague; M. Gnr. Manley; S/Sgt. and Mrs. Henderson; C.Q.M.S. and Mrs. Dorry; Capt. Fennel R.A., representing Commander R.A.; S/Sgt. Glaspool, H.K.S.R.A.; Sgt. Major and Mrs. Kent, R.A.S.C.; Mr. and Mrs. Adams; Sgt. and Mrs. Woods; Sgt. A. T. Smith, S.W.B.; Mr. H. Reg. Latham, E.E.S.; Mrs. Lay; Mr. and Mrs. Horne; Mrs. Stone; Mrs. Flood; Mrs. Tighe; Mrs. Miskin; Mrs. Watson; Mrs. W. H. Bailey; Mrs. Snook; Mrs. Kilton-Vaughan; R.S.M. and Mrs. Lee; S/Sgt. Optimism Is Life's Ruling Factor

Cheerfulness Essential To Happiness

Danger Of Unfit Minds

(By the Rev. J. N. Lewis Bryan.)

(This is another of the series of articles written exclusively for the "Sunday Herald" by the local Army chaplain.)

I WAS standing, some years ago, on the Station platform at Cambridge, waiting for the London train, when a man dashed up to a penny-in-the-slot machine to a penny, and put a coin in to the slot, hoping to get out a box of matches. Unfortunately the coin stuck, and when at last he forced it in, nothing happened. "Blow and bust," I heard him say, "it's the only coin I have and it won't work the wretched thing." (Those were not the exact words, but they are near enough for my purpose).

With amazing generosity I produced a penny for him, he got his matches and we got onto the train together. The reason the penny would not work would have been obvious, if he had looked at the notice displayed immediately above the machine. It read as follows: "Bent and battered coins will not work this machine."

I have often thought about that incident, and I pass it on to you this morning as the subject for this hundredth article I have had the honour and pleasure to write for this paper, because it is so extraordinarily true to life. A bent and battered spirit will not work the machine of life, a bent and battered mind is no good either, and a bent and battered soul is the worst of all.

We came into this world as finished articles in miniature. Through the years of childhood, in school and on the fields of sport, our bodies were developed; until we reached maturity. There is no time this morning to discuss the condition of those who are born unfit for the fight of life—those who are born blind or deformed or feeble minded. Our hearts go out to them in sympathy, and we can only leave them in the hands of God our Father; remembering that many of those so afflicted have lived lives of wonderful usefulness for their fellow-men despite their infirmities.

Bright Spirit Important. Surely it is one of the greatest arguments for another life beyond the grave where these inequalities will be remedied; and those who have never known all the joy of life as we know it; will find a happiness that is eternal. Let us think of ourselves; who in body at least are fit and well. It takes almost God twenty-one years to make a man, and yet we can undo God's handiwork in one split second, or by the slower but equally sure method of self-neglect, or carelessness.

What about these spirits of ours? So much depends upon them. The man who is always looking on the dark side; or nursing a grievance is precious little use to anyone. You remember in the War the greatest consideration in the minds of the High Command was how to keep up the spirits of the troops. No effort was spared in this direction. It starts in the

Like A Camera Film. The mind is like a film in a camera. It registers every fleeting word, and deed and impression, and the hardest thing in the world is how to forget the only way to fight against sins of the mind is always to think of beauty. Goodness is only beauty in morals. Truth is only beauty in knowledge. If as a great pessimistic Hedonist of the last century put it, "every sin in the world takes place in the mind," we can also remember that every deed of kindness, and every striving after holiness, takes place there too.

Last of all the soul. Is that bent and battered? We can hide our real selves from our fellow-men for a time at least, but what do they look like in the sight of God? The day is coming when over souls will be the only things that are left us. If we have made them poor and shoddy during the years in which they were ours to develop, then we only have ourselves to blame.

There comes a time in the life of a coin when it has to be scraped, and withdrawn from circulation. Thank God that need never happen to us. There is always the wonderful, compelling dynamic power of the love of Christ to remake us what we can and ought to be.

Let us then take another look at life this morning, with all its possibilities let us live a little less for self and more for others; let us learn to have a more cheerful smile, and a more hopeful spirit, and we shall find that the world that looks so dark and gloomy, is really full of gladness and sunshine.

Miss Gerke Passes Through

DID NOT FIND JOB
SHE WANTED.

Secretary Of Late
Governor Rolph.

WOMAN WHO FLEW TO
CAPITALS OF 48 STATES

In the State of California, high officials say she is "almost a governor." America's foremost fliers know her as the "flying secretary." Chief executives of 48 states have met her as the aerial courier of the late Governor "Sunny Jim" Rolph, of California.

She is Miss Betty Gerke, who passed through Hong Kong on the Dollar Steamship around-the-world liner President Johnson yesterday, visiting the Far East in the course of a round-the-world tour.

Formerly the private secretary of the late Governor Rolph of California, Miss Gerke is probably the world's most press-agented stenographer. In 1931, she won international recognition when she flew from San Francisco to the capitals of every state in the Union, bearing invitations to the Los Angeles Olympic Games. At that time, she was known as America's No. 1 Social Envoy.

Looking For Job.

To-day, Miss Gerke is touring the world—in search of a job. And she ought to get one, as she carries letters of recommendation from such dignitaries as Mr. Frank C. Jordan, Secretary of State of California; Mr. Jesse Hession, Deputy Attorney-General of California; Mr. Lewis B. Mayer, President of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, well known motion picture producers, and Mr. Joseph Schenck, President of United Artists, as well as an official letter of introduction signed and sealed by the late Governor Rolph. This testimonial, signed by the governor when he was in a San Francisco hospital, is one of the last documents penned by "Sunny Jim."

Miss Gerke speaks sorrowfully, but proudly, of her acquaintance with the man who for 19-years was Mayor of San Francisco and who will live in history as California's best-loved Governor.

Good Word For All.

"Sunny Jim" Rolph was a true gentleman and an exceptional man," she declared. "He always had a good word for everyone."

"He was unusual," Miss Gerke said. "Sunny Jim" never wore any footgear but boots, the old fashioned cowpuncher's boots worn in frontier days. Even when he was attending formal social functions, the Governor insisted on wearing high-heeled boots, beneath his immaculately pressed dress trousers.

When Miss Gerke first became secretary to the Governor of California, she started a scrapbook collection of news stories and pictures dealing with her secretarial activities. Now she has four heavy volumes, filled with news items published in 48 states.

A new volume entitled "My World Tour" is already crammed with clippings. But Miss Gerke says "That's just a beginning."

Will Come Again.

When interviewed, Miss Gerke expressed her delight with the beauty of the port of Hong Kong and her regret was that her itinerary did not permit her remaining in Hong Kong for a longer period on this trip. She, however, promised to make another trip to Hong Kong in the not too distant future, at which time, she would stay longer here.

In passing through Hong Kong, Miss Gerke had only time for a limited amount of sightseeing, but on Friday evening, she was a guest at a Chinese dinner party together with Capt. Otto Kohlmeier, Commander of the President Johnson, Mr. Rudolph Block, correspondent of the New York American, one of the world's greatest newspapers, and a number of other prominent passengers on board the President Johnson.

MARCUS SHOW'S FAREWELL

FITTING CLIMAX TO GRAND ENTERTAINMENT

After a fortnight's run in Hong Kong the Marcus Show staged their grand finale at the Queen's Theatre last night with the "Fantasies of 1934," when the whole company gave an excellent display of riotous fun and sustained animation.

There was never a dull moment, one act succeeding another without a lull, and the whole company giving of their best in their farewell performance in Hong Kong.

A large and appreciative audience applauded each "Incident" in a hearty manner, and each artist received a loud and long ovation in the finale number "So Long Hong Kong" when, to the merry melody "So long, I'll see you again, see you again some day" the company passed through the orchestra stalls to the stage, to add a final triumph to a great show.

Mr. Marcus is to be complimented on the magnificent show he has brought to Hong Kong, and the exceptional ability of each and every one of his artistes.

Of the "Incidents" of the "Fantasies," the scene "In a Cuban Garden," in which the Bounding All Babes displayed some of their marvellous feats, was the outstanding item on the programme.

"The Garden of Girls" also stood out as an exceptionally fine act, the singing of Lillian McCoy, and the Parade of Beauty being accorded round after round of applause.

Les Sechrist in the "Accordian Speciality" was, as in previous performances, an immensely popular number, his efforts on his elaborate instrument being thoroughly appreciated by all.

They really rousing number, however, was the final incident, "So Long Hong Kong" in which the whole company were applauded with the wildest of enthusiasm. It was a truly fitting close to a truly wonderful show.

for the takin'. Beds an' beddin' an' coats an' toffs shoes an' suitcases o' furniture—all for the liftin' of 'em. Why don't ye get yer ould man to give yo a hand an' borrow a truck?"

"Sah! warned Martha, placing her finger to her lips. 'Sah! Phil is asleep."

"Sure yer ould man's alwise asleep!" snorted the widow. "Stick a pin in his backside, missus, an' make him le'p out av bed for wance in his life. 'Make hay while the sun shines!' say I. 'Make hay while the sun shines!'"

Mrs. Clancy shuffled across to her room and Martha went back to the window. She stared out once more at the burning city. She smiled wryly with a little curl of the lip. "My God—did ye hear that?" she said as though speaking to someone. "Did ye hear that? 'Make hay while the sun shines!'"

The city was illumined by golden light, which lit up the enervated faces of its inhabitants and made grotesque shadows on its streets. But it was winter, and the wind ate through thin clothing, a merciless sly wind that laughed with a hollow sound at everyone's discomfort. Suddenly Martha thought, "Why shouldn't I? Just why shouldn't I?"

She watched down with new interest at the people trundling their hand-carts piled high with loot. "After all," she argued, "they're not doin' wrong. It's not really 'stealing.' They need the things. They'd burn if they didn't take them. An' the Tans 'ud let 'em burn—only be too glad to see nothin' but ashes left!" And again the thought came, "Why shouldn't I, too?"

Suddenly she reached a decision. She ran across the landing and knocked on Mrs. Clancy's door. The old woman shouted "Come in!" She was in bed, with her bala of silk stretched beside her.

"Ye're not goin' out again?" asked Martha with a hopeful note in her voice. Now her eyes and her face glowed as had the old woman's.

"No bloomin' fear!" Mrs. Clancy retorted. "I've had enough for wan night. There'll be more burnin' to-morra' night, wait till ye see! Them Tans aren't finished yet—not by a long chalk." She gave the bala of silk an affectionate hug. "Are ye goin' out yerself now?"

"Yeh. I'll run down an' just have a look. Phil an' the kids are asleep. I won't be ten minnits. P'raps ye'd be lendin' me yer shawl? Me coat's over the kids, an' it's a cold night."

"Could? Crikey—that wind 'ud cut the tail off a brass monkey! See if ye can't get somethin' for yerself, agra. There's no need to come back empty handed, I'm tellin' ye! Don't be an' oinseach among all that loot!"

"Indeed an' I won't!" cried Martha with sudden determination. She took the shawl from its hook behind the door and wrapped herself into its voluminous folds. She tiptoed down the winding tenement stairs, fearful of awakening the curiosity of the rapacious old women who infested the building. But to-night everyone was seemingly busy with his or her affairs and no one accosted her.

Outside in the street she found that it was colder than she had really thought. All the way down Patrick-street she huddled close to the walls. Flames were still shooting up from the corner of Prince's-street. Fire-engines clanged and dashed around. Firemen shouted and tugged at heavy hoses. An occasional lorry of Tans slid past. The men in the lorries were enjoying the spectacle immensely.

Cash's fine emporium was almost in ruins. The walls had not yet fallen in. The counters and fittings were blazing merrily. Articles were still being salvaged. As soon as they were thrown on to the pavement they were snatched up and borne off.

At first Martha stood on the outskirts of the crowd. Then gradually she began to edge her way in and in. Her exertions, the heat of the bodies around her, and the glow of the fire warmed her. On the pavement just outside the main entrance to the shop she saw a pile of half-burned bedding.

She examined it disdainfully from a little distance away. Then a blanket caught her eye. It was a fine heavy blanket, badly charred at one corner. It was of no use to the shopkeeper now. To take that blanket would certainly not be "stealing," not even "looting," thought Martha. It was nothing better than a "throw-out." She had a mental vision of her three children shivering under their light covering. That blanket might be a "throw-out," but it was heavy and would be warm—"as warm as toast."

The crowd were now interested in a fireman who was climbing up a long ladder to the top of a blazing toy shop on the other corner of Prince's-street. Martha plucked up her courage, made a dart forward, seized the blanket, and plunged desperately into the mass of people behind.

Someone shouted. A fireman ran a little way after her, then shrugged his shoulders good-humouredly. She fought her way through the crowd. Nobody attempted to hinder her, although she imagined that everyone wished to snatch the blanket from her. In a few minutes she was clear of all the heaving bodies. Then she was in Prince's-street. She ran as fast as her legs would carry her down to Old George's-street.

There she drew up, heaving with- out restraint like an animal after a gallop. "Dear God!" she said aloud. "I've got it! I've got it! Oh, thank you, God! Thank you!"

She walked warily up Old George's-street with the uncertain trend of a deer who expects to scent enemies on every breath of wind. All this time she had been holding her prize in her arms, as though it were a baby. In the Grand Parade she halted, rolled the blanket into a bundle, and tucked it under her shawl. She ran across the wide Parade and skirted along by the shop windows.

In seven minutes she would be at home. Dear Heaven—what a thought! Henceforth her children would sleep in comfort. It was a big blanket. She would double it. On the bitterest night they would not feel the cold. In summer she could pawn it. She was always pawning things. Long ago she had pawned her wedding ring and had substituted a sixpenny one to keep people from talking. But it was good to have things even if only to be able to pawn them when the pinch came. And again she cried from the very bottom of her heart, "Oh, thank you, God! Thank you!"

Just as she reached the Queen's Old Castle a lorry dashed round from Castle-street. Her heart leaped from within. She almost fainted away with terror. She was certain that they would stop her and snatch away her prize. Then she lost her presence of mind. She began to run back towards the corner of Washington-street, hoping that the lorry would swerve into Patrick-street and leave her in peace.

The men in the lorry heard the sound of running feet. They saw a shadow crouching down by the shop windows. The young officer had a sudden vision of a bomb landing in their midst. "Halt!" he

GRIM HUNT FOR MURDERER

Police Collect 2,600 Finger-Prints.

WHOLE VILLAGE INSPECTED.

Prague.

The finger-prints of every man within a radius of 12 miles of Kostova Pasteka, a village in Slovakia, were taken by the police in an effort to trace a murderer.

Altogether, 2,600 people between the ages of 14 and 60 were examined in six weeks.

Among them was 26-year-old Vasil Losak, the son of a wealthy miller, whose finger-prints corresponded with those on a window of the victim's house—the only clue the police had.

He was arrested and sentenced to 13 years' simple imprisonment.

It was stated that he attacked the murdered man, an innkeeper, and his wife with a hammer as they lay in bed. He then stole 25 cigarettes and five shillings. He said he wanted the money "for a spree."

After the trial the innkeeper's wife died of her wounds, and the sentence on Losak was increased to 13 years' hard labour.—Reuter.

FLOWERS REUNITE COUPLE.

Hungarian Recognises His Home.

Budapest.

After spending 19 years in prison in Soviet Russia, Janos Balog, a Hungarian farmer, has returned to Belenyes-Ujak, his native village.

When he reached the village he scarcely recognised it, so many changes had occurred in his absence. He wandered through the streets, looking for his wife—but he could not find the house where they had lived.

Then, in a window-box, he saw some flowers he had given her on their wedding day. He knocked on the door. His wife opened it. Recognition was instant, and there was a joyful reunion.—Reuter.

NAZIS PROMOTE TIDY STREETS

Orders that police shall keep stricter watch than hitherto on people who drop banana skins and pieces of paper in the parks have been issued here.

At present offenders can be fined a shilling on the spot—but the police have hitherto often shown leniency.—Reuter.

shouted. "Halt there! Halt, or I fire!"

The shadow ran on and on, crouching almost to the ground. A sharp order rang out. Rifles snapped. The shadow ceased its movement, swayed, fell forward without a sound. The lorry drew up with a long-drawn squeal.

The young officer and a private sprang down and walked across the wide pavement. They bent over the still figure and saw that it was a woman clutching something in her arms. The officer opened her shawl and drew out a bundle. He unrolled it, and found it to be a blanket with a charred end.

The private took off his cap, not in respect for the dead, but to scratch his head. "Blimey!" he ejaculated. "A blin'd' woman! Blimey! I could've sworn it was a Skimmer! What did she run like that for, anyway?"

The officer looked at the blanket and at the bleeding woman on the flagstones. He said nothing. He took a corner of the blanket in each hand and spread it carefully over the body. Then he swung back towards the lorry, followed by the private. They drove off into the night.

MOTERING NOTES

DEFECTIVE CARS IN AUSTRALIA.

Automobile Club of New York's Survey.

In view of the large number of older model cars now in use in Australia, an analysis of mechanical defects made by the Automobile Club of New York and forwarded to the N. R. M. A., is of interest.

The club examined thousands of cars, and a tabulated report shows that only 34.5 per cent. of the number were in perfect condition. Of the remainder 32.7 per cent. had defective brakes and 24.8 per cent. faulty headlights.

The percentages of other defects were wheel alignment 13.1, stop light 13.2 horn, windscreen wiper, and rear vision mirror 4.8, tail and packing lights 4.3, steering 3.6. The American club uses its figures to illustrate the need for some regular inspection of cars in the interests of road safety.

TYRE EXAMINATION

Device To Facilitate Search For Nails.

Whenever a tyre is punctured and the casing is subsequently removed from the wheel, a careful examination should be made of both the inner and outer surface of the casing to see if any nail or other sharp article has become embedded in the rubber.

The inspection of the inside of the type will be facilitated if some device is used to spread the walls apart.

For that purpose the wheel brace is useful, being placed horizontally across the tyre with the handle downwards, so that the walls are opened out. The brace can then be moved round the inner circumference of the casing as the inspection proceeds.

AIDING MOTORISTS IN BRITAIN

London.

Special vans designed to carry standard signs officially recognised by the Ministry of Transport and also equipped to render assistance to motorists who may be in difficulties either through accident or breakdown, have been placed on the road by the R.A.C.

SPEED LIMITS ARE INEFFECTIVE

London.

The ineffectiveness of a speed limit as a preventive against motor accidents is illustrated by the fact that in 1933 there were 256 motor accidents in the Royal Parks, involving injury to 280 people, eight of whom were killed. The limit in these parks is 20 m.p.h.

MOTOR RACING SUPPORTER PASSES

Sir Claud Hamilton Archer Hill, Lieut.-Governor of the Isle of Man from 1926 to 1933—and a strong supporter of motor racing in the island, died recently.

HARD STEERING A WARNING.

Stiffness Caused By Wrong Inflation.

Any noticeable change in the responsiveness and general behaviour of the steering gear, says the R.A.C.A., should prompt an immediate investigation.

Stiffness or the tendency of the steering wheel to pull to one side or the other is frequently caused by wrong tyre inflation and the first step, when making an inspection should be to test the pressures of the front tyres, which should be identical and in accordance with the rate of inflation advised for the tyre and car concerned.

If correction of the pressures does not modify the fault it is wise to have a close inspection made of all the working parts of the steering, including the toe-in of the front wheels and the tilt of the front axle. Similar precautions, which naturally imply examination of the steering connections, wheel bearings, and king-pins should also be taken in the event of any pronounced looseness.

REPAIRING PETROL TANKS.

Effective Temporary Measure.

A puncture or leak in a petrol tank can be temporarily repaired effectively in the following manner: When it is inconvenient to remove the tank in order that the leak might soldered, the hole, provided it is situated on a flat or almost flat part of the tank, can be enlarged to the form of an elongated slot.

A narrow piece of metal is then threaded on to a small bolt so that the plate and bolt-head can be passed through the slot in the tank and then turned at a right angle to it.

Holding the bolt in place with a pair of long-nosed pliers, a packing washer, above which a wide—but fairly flexible metal washer is placed, can be bolted into position, the pliers being withdrawn before the final tightening turns are given to the nut of the bolt.

CONTROL OF MOTOR SPORT.

Australian Ruling.

According to advice received by the N.R.M.A., the Australian Automobile Association has received from the Royal Automobile Club of Great Britain, delegation of the sporting control of automobilism in the Commonwealth of Australia.

This control is to be exercised in conformity with the International Sporting Code and the rules of the International Association of recognised automobile bodies. While the English club has delegated the sporting control, it will still represent the Commonwealth on the international body.

SAWING PIPING

When a hacksaw is used to cut metal piping the teeth of the saw frequently catch harshly in the cut and the blade may be snapped. A good plan is to reverse the blade of the saw so that the teeth point towards the operator.

Don't Be A Slave
To A System.

(By LADY RHODES.)

A recent experience of playing among a very strict set of "Cul-bertsonians" has confirmed me in the belief that it is a mistake to adhere too rigidly to that system or, indeed, to any other. It often pays to make a departure. Here is a case in point.

The hands were:—

North:—
S.—A J 4
H.—A Q
D.—Q J 10 6
C.—Q 7 5 4

West:—
S.—8 7 3 2
H.—10 3
D.—8 5 4 3
C.—10 9 3

East:—
S.—Q 10 9
H.—K J 9 6 5 4
D.—K 7
C.—A 8

South:—
S.—K 6 5
H.—9 8 2
D.—A 9 2
C.—K J 6 2

Neither side was vulnerable, and the bidding was:—
North. 1 No Trump. North. No
Bid.
East. 2 Hearts.
South. No Bid.
West. No Bid.

South opened with the Ace of Diamonds, and East was two down, making four tricks in Hearts, the King of Diamonds and the Ace of Clubs. Though North and South seemed rather pleased, it was really a cheap save. South "did not like to bid 3 Clubs on so poor a suit" so, having no Heart guard, she passed. Had she bid 3 Clubs,
North would have bid 3 No Trumps, and the contract would have been made with ease.

Take Reasonable Risks.
It is true that East held only 5 Hearts, and if the King of Diamonds had been in West's hand, the contract would have been defeated, but it is impossible to win at bridge without taking reasonable risks.

With such a hand as South's, any bid over a partner's 1 No Trump is better than a pass. North can hardly be blamed, after her partner's silence, for not bidding 2
No Trumps; if South had held little or nothing, the hand would have been awkward to play and might have proved expensive.

Another hand which occurred shortly afterwards illustrates the same point: North and South were vulnerable.
North held
S.—8 2
H.—A Q 8 5 4
D.—K 6
C.—K Q 5 2

South held
S.—10 3
H.—10 9 8
D.—A J 4 3
C.—A 9 8 5

North bid 1 Heart, East 2
Spades, South passed, and so did West. North's position was difficult. Her Hearts were scarcely strong enough to rebid to 3, while 3 Clubs or an Informative double might lead to trouble. She therefore passed, and East, who held 6 Spades to the King, Queen, Jack, and the King of Hearts, was only one down.

Here again South was at fault.
She did not fancy 3 Diamonds and lacked the conventional "adequate trump support." She therefore passed, the worst possible bid on her hand. Had she plucked up courage and said 3 Hearts, North would certainly have bid four.

The game can be made on the combined hands, unless East holds both the King and Knave of Hearts —not a bad risk, as the odds are three to one against that distribution.
An Advisable Opening.
Even the rule that requires 2½ tricks for an opening suit bid can be neglected on occasions. With a hand of strong distributional strength, such as:
S.—A 10 9 5 4 2 D.—7
H.—A J 8 6 8 C.—J
It is advisable to open with one
Spade. Do not, however, open

CENTENARY AIR RACE

Huge Entry List For £10,000 Prize.

MOLLISONS AND KINGSFORD
SMITH TO COMPETE

At least 25 planes will halt at Singapore in October, during the course of the greatest aeroplane race in the world, the contest for a prize of £10,000 offered by Sir Macpherson
Robertson, a Melbourne business magnate, for a flight from England to Australia.

So large is the entry for this competition that the Melbourne Centenary Council are finding it most difficult to provide a suitable landing ground for these planes and it is probable that one of the several race course grounds near Melbourne will have to be requisitioned for the landing of competitors.

This air race which is one of the main features of the Melbourne Centenary celebrations has attracted world-renowned flyers from England, Australia, Italy, France,
Germany and America.

Miss Amy Johnson will be a competitor to her equally famous husband, Mr. Jim Mollison, while Sir Kingsford Smith, who at present holds the record from Australia to England, has also entered a plane.

The Race is being held in conjunction with the celebrations of Melbourne's 100th birthday as the capital city of Victoria.

AVIATION PROGRESS IN KWANGSI.

Many New Orders For Foreign Countries.

Kwangsi will soon be able to boast of having a remarkable air-force, according to reports from the south. Sponsored by General Pai Chung-hai, who is personally taking a lively interest in the work of organisation and training, it is reported a new air field has been prepared in Liuchow where 40 machines are already concentrated and orders for more have been placed with firms abroad.

with less than 2½ tricks if you are not prepared to take charge of the subsequent proceedings, either by rebidding your original suit or by showing another five-card holding.

Similarly, when vulnerable, you do not need more than 2½ tricks
if your hand is a strong two-suitor.
Holding, for instance,
S.—A Q 3 6 2 D.—7 2
H.—A 10 9 8 4 C.—10
It is absurd to pass even fourth in hand on the ground of having only 2½ honour tricks.

Undoubtedly, among experts, as time goes on, the tendency is for the bidding to become less conventional and more elastic.

HARRIMAN'S SECRETARY'S DEATH JUMP

ENDS LIFE FROM SKYSCRAPER.

SEQUEL TO FRAUD CASE

New York, Yesterday. Miss Sarah Burke, age 55, the former confidential secretary of Mr. J. W. Harriman, the former New York financier, has committed suicide, according to the police, by jumping from the upper floor of a Fifth Avenue skyscraper. Miss Burke was an employee of the Harriman Bank for 22 years. — Reuter.

Mr. J. W. Harriman, former President of the Harriman National Bank and Trust Company, was found guilty on Tuesday by a Federal Court jury on charges of falsifying the records and misapplying the funds of the bank.

Mr. A. M. Austin, former Vice-President of the bank, was acquitted on similar charges.

Harriman will be sentenced on June 27.

DELEGATES NOT NAMED

SPECIAL TO SUNDAY HERALD.

Berlin, Yesterday. The German Government has accepted Great Britain's invitation to send a delegate to discuss the moratorium. Who and when they will be sent is so far undisclosed. — United Press per S. C. Gold Bar Co.

WIMBLEDON AND SANDWICH

At Sandwich, Gene Sarazen will be leading the American contingent, which includes Densmore, Shute, last year's winner, Macdonald Smith, and Willie Macfarlane. The British players expected to be in the running are Alfred Padgham and Henry Cotton.

A Chinese named Tsung Wan, a 42-year-old employee of the Texaco Oil Company at Tsun Wan, was admitted to the Kwong Wah Hospital last night suffering from fractured ankles and other injuries which he sustained when he fell from a lighter at the Texaco Company.

Mourners at the graveside during the funeral yesterday of eight-year-old Michael Pine, who died in the Government Civil Hospital on Friday evening after being washed down a nullah into the harbour. The boy was one of five children thrown into the nullah by a demented Chinese. — (King's Studio).

AUSTRALIA DO WELL

A crowd of 30,000 saw Maurice Leyland (95) and Leslie Ames (44) come out to resume the England innings at 293 for 5 in sunny weather and on a good wicket. The pair had already added 111 for the sixth wicket and the large crowd fully expected to see Warwick Armstrong and Charles Kello-way's 1920 Test record of 187 shattered.

A groan went up at 311, however, when one of Wall's faster deliveries uprooted the Yorkshireman's off stump after the stand had produced 129 runs.

In scoring his second Test century, Leyland hit a six and 14 boundaries. He batted for 210 minutes for his 109, scored out of 181, which was a great innings during a crisis. Sutcliffe, Hammond, and Hendren were back in the pavilion for 99. The Yorkshireman's most prolific scoring strokes were beautifully timed off-drives, and neatly placed leg shots.

CHIPPERFIELD'S CATCH
George Geary joined Ames and batted doggedly to see the score raised to 359 before Chipperfield brought off a smart catch, waist high, in the slips off one of Wall's expressers. 359-7-9.

Joined by Hendley Verity, Ames experienced an unexpected piece of luck when Oldfield dropped an easy catch behind the wicket when standing back to Wall, who bowled at a great pace throughout. Ames

SILVER RISE TO STIMULATE COMMODITIES

100,000,000 OUNCES PURCHASED.

MORGENTHAU'S PLAN

SPECIAL TO SUNDAY HERALD.
(By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1894. Received June 23, 11.20 p.m.)

Washington, Yesterday. It is semi-officially estimated that the United States has purchased 100,000,000 ounces of additional silver to carry out the Silver Act's provisions.

Through the stabilisation fund, the Treasury Secretary, Mr. Henry Morgenthau, is mapping plans to purchase nearly 1,300,000,000 ounces of additional silver to carry out the Silver Act's provisions.

Government officials are most hopeful that a rise in silver prices will stimulate commodities.

The Bureau of engraving and printing will shortly begin to print U.S.$1,000,000 worth of new silver currency in order to stimulate its use. — United Press, per S. C. Gold Bar Co.

SILVER WITHDRAWAL

SPECIAL TO SUNDAY HERALD.

New York, Yesterday. The Commodity Exchange has officially announced that a total of 10,570,713 ounces of silver was withdrawn from its depositories on Tuesday and Wednesday, leaving 92,136,662 ounces in store. — United Press, per S. C. Gold Bar Co.

LONDON SILVER MARKET.

Prices Advance.

London, Yesterday. London silver prices were up 5/16 for spot and 3/4 for forward to-day, as follows:—

	June 22	June 23
Spot	20	20-5/16
Forward	20-1/8	20-3/8

The London on New York cross-rate at closing to-day was U.S.$5.03-9/16, compared with U.S.$5.03-3/8 at closing yesterday. — Our Own Correspondent.

The close of play he was undefeated with 103, scored out of 192 in 180 minutes, while McCabe had scored 24.

Brown, who has hit 14 boundaries, exploited the hook shot with marked success, while his leg shots and driving found many gaps in the well-placed England field. He was given a rousing ovation when he returned to the pavilion.

Thus at the conclusion of the day's play, Australia, with 8 wickets in hand, were only 248 runs in arrears. — Reuter.

SECOND CENTURY

Maurice Leyland's century was his second three-figure Test innings against the Australians, his previous century being a knock of 137 at Melbourne in his Test debut in the 1928-29 series.

Ames had the distinction of scoring his first century in a Test, his previous best being 42 not out in the Australian series.

Ames' form this season has been particularly good, especially when his recent operation for appendicitis is taken into consideration.

His wicket keeping in the first Test at Trent Bridge was one of the features of the match, the amazing catch with which he secured the wicket of W. A. Brown, after he had scored 73, being particularly noteworthy.

Neither Ames nor Leyland met with success in the first Test, Ames being dismissed for 7 and 12, and Leyland for 6 and 18.

Leyland's 18 in the second innings, however, was the result of a dogged stand in which he almost thwarted Woodfull's plans for victory.

MARCUS SHOW LEAVES

Performing in Canton To-night.

CHINESE GIRLS TO JOIN COMPANY

The Greater Marcus Show leaves to-day for Canton, after a far more successful run in Hong Kong than was anticipated by Mr. A. B. Marcus.

After 11 days in Canton the company will return here, and ship for Manila on the s.s. President Coolidge, which sails on July 6.

One of the schemes which has appealed to Mr. Marcus is the inclusion in the show of a Chinese Act, and, with this in mind, he was advertised for 12 Chinese girls to travel with the show on its world tour. To date 30 applications have been received, but a final decision will not be made until the show returns from Canton, where it is possible that other girls will be interviewed.

Expectations have been more than fulfilled here, and interest in the show has continued throughout. The attendance last night was the second largest record the largest being on the opening night.

HOUSE BOOKED UP

The show opens in Canton tonight at the Grand Theatre, and wires have been received that the house is already fully booked.

The whole of the Marcus troupe have been thrilled with Hong Kong, as Mr. Marcus puts it. "The are never tired of crossing the ferry and looking at it, or of traveling to Repulse Bay to swim."

Mr. Marcus, of course, is an old hand here, he managed the Star Theatre in Kowloon 10 years ago, and took the first foreign show to Canton about 20 years ago.

There is a possibility that the Marcus Show will give one or two performances here when passing through on route for Manila.

After Manila the show will proceed to Singapore and India. It is due to open in Rangoon on October 1.

To-day the Queen's Theatre will revert back to their usual high-class films. Robert Montgomery and Norma Shearer are now appearing in "Riptide," the serial story of which was published early this month in the China Mail.

COL DI LANA ON PRATAS

Attempt To Refloat Vessel Last Night.

Work of discharging the cargo of soy beans and groundnuts into the sea is being carried out on board the Italian motor vessel, Col di Lana which went aground on Pratras Island on Wednesday night. The tugboat Henry Keswick, is standing by, and an attempt to refloat the ship was to have been made to-night.

LONGSHOREMEN'S APPEAL

Roosevelt Demands Immediate Report.

SPECIAL TO SUNDAY HERALD.
(By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1894. Received June 23, 4.32 p.m.)

New London, Yesterday. President Roosevelt has telegraphed to Mr. Merriam, referring to the appeals of the longshoremen for Federal aid in the strike dispute made to the Secretary of Labour, Miss Frances Perkins, earlier this week.

The President asked for an immediate report. — United Press, per S. C. Gold Bar Co.
